

Compliment Day

24th January 2018

In today's fast paced world, taking the time to compliment those around us is an art that we believe should be passed down to our children so that it isn't lost in time. Using National Compliment Day helps us to teach our children the way to be sincere in their thanks. It also helps them to appreciate those around them and to not take the people in their lives for granted.

Complimenting character versus a new haircut are different rewards. The first says you respect the person and the other tells them you paid attention. Sometimes the receiver needs to hear one or the other, or both.

We started the week with an Assembly introducing the children to the fact that Wednesday is National Compliment Day. There was a further assembly on the day itself.

All classes spent time as a class discussing and sharing compliments to each other. Around the school - as children stood in line at lunch or went out to play – compliments were heard being given out by - children and grown ups alike.

A brilliant day that left everyone feeling a little bit better about themselves!
